NOT A GOOD LAW

SOME amendments to the bottle club law, which legislators refused to abolish, make it a bit more amenable to legal control, but it still is not a good commentary on the long-established Nebraska reputation for controlling some of the accouterments of what we are privileged to call civilization.

It would be much better for each community which has the mind to vote by popular ballot as to whether it wanted to sell liquor by the drink rather than accept this piece of deviousness which substitutes for the more democratic method of determining popular opinion.

It still is not a good law. Nor is the law good which permits long-established clubs and lodges to sell liquor by the drink over the bar while citizens who are not members of such institutions are deprived of similar privileges.

ANGEL WINGS?

SOMETHING new is going on in Nebraska penitentiary where about one of every three prisoners is there for check-writing—bad checks, forgeries, or raising check sums.

A group of prisoners organized what is known as Checks Anonymous. They earn about $6 a month as prisoners and from that sum they are contributing $1.50 to repay those on the outside whom they cheated—merchants, banks, etc.

If the system seems a sort of slick way by convicts to buy their way out of future prison sentences, the letter which accompanies the repayment—usually sent through county attorneys offices—ends that idea. The letter in part reads:

"I realize that a bogus check writer is a thief, liar and coward. I do not intend to become identified with this segment of society. I ask nothing in return and realize that prosecution may proceed against me."

In many places the letters and the accompanying checks to pay up the "deficits" have brought back the news that detainers against the culprits have been dropped.

How long this wave of reformation will last isn't known. Perhaps it's genuine.

UNCLE SAP AGAIN

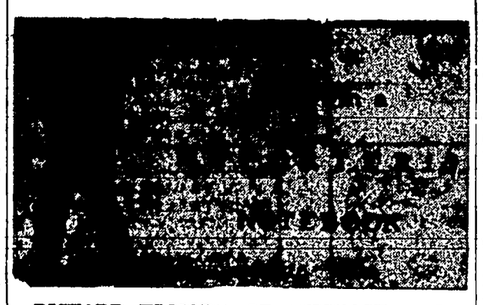

A NUMBER of women including Margaret Higgins, roving reporter and a most competent one, and Clare Boothe Luce, one time congresswoman, are incensed because the federal government did not see fit to throw out the red carpet for Madame Nhu who since her arrival in this country has done little but criticize our institutions and accuse the State Department of stirring up the successful revolution in Viet Nam.

The latest blast was that our government actually incited the murder of her husband and brother-in-law, the ruler of the country.

The women sympathizers—a Nebraska women also is critical of the Washington administration's refusal to receive the Madame officially—fall into the error many of us do without knowing exactly what happened. The Madame was not badly treated in most places even though the White House did not recognize her. What the average American would like to know—who is financing her trip? How much American foreign aid cash has been used by the Madame to seek and obtain luxurious quarters in big city hotels?

There is no call to sympathize with the Madame. She is one of the Viet Nam gang who ruthlessly and tyrannically set up a dictatorship and were so busy oppressing the Buddhists that they let the U. S. fight the Reds instead of doing it themselves. The whole situation ought to be proof enough that our generous Uncle Sap again was played for a Patsy.

WHY are coons running around in Nebraska City?

One authority says it is because the dogs are kept chained up Most of them, anyway.

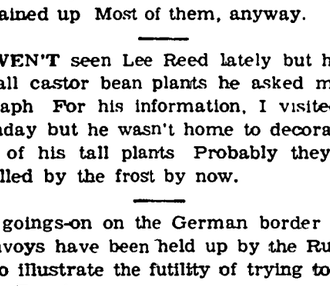

I HAVEN'T seen Lee Reed lately but he had some tall castor bean plants he asked me to photograph For his information, I visited him one Sunday but he wasn't home to decorate the picture of his tall plants Probably they have been felled by the frost by now.

THE goings-on on the German border where our convoys have been held up by the Russians ought to illustrate the futility of trying to trade with the Russians

This ought to prove without question that the anti-testing treaty with Russia is meaningless and that to sell them wheat to help them build up their economy so they can work more shenanigans against us is downright crazy.

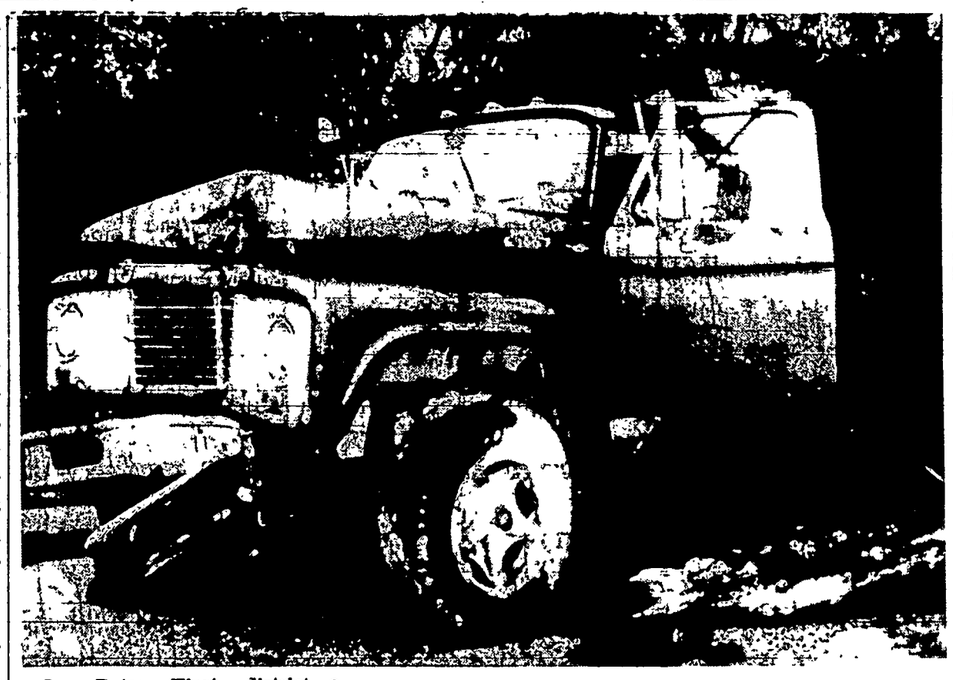

SECRETARY Rusk says they can't hold up our convoys He reminds me of the fellow who told the policeman, "You can't put me in jail," when he already was behind the bars.

The United States is going to have to get its dander up and there may be a lot of bloodshed, thanks to the architect who designed the present split up of Europe after World War II He's dead, of course, so it won't matter to him.

It used to be the clergymen who prepared people for outer space travel.

Once upon a time there were some pheasant hunters and other hunters-of-the-beast

It seems that prior to the "big hunt" out west, a couple of awards were given to Nebraska City hunters, namely Paul Barker and Winston Rashleigh, for their mighty efforts of the field the previous year

"Sunky" Barker, who became well known for his scent after mixing it up with a striped beast, was presented a trophy for his valiant efforts of surviving on the battlefield

And then there was ole' dead eye Win, who was awarded a special feline trophy for ridding the sporting field of mavericks with large teeth and fierce appearance

All's well that ends well The hunters and honorees returned with their bag limits .... of pheasants that is

Hall of Justice mice are addicts

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — It seems that the mice which make their home in the Hall of Justice have become addicted to narcotics

Peter J Talmachoff, chief deputy of the criminal division, explained Monday that the mice find their way into a closely guarded room where several hundred pounds of marijuana and other narcotics are held as evidence in pending cases.

"Those mice are addicts," he declared. "They run riot all night, then stagger off to their nest, leaving the floor littered with marijuana."

Corn harvest is ahead of normal

CROP REPORT

LINCOLN (UPI) — Favorable weather last week allowed harvest operations to move at a record rate, government crop observers said Monday in their weekly report.

They said a fourth of the corn crop was picked to bring the total to 80 per cent, about two weeks ahead of normal.

Moisture content of grain remained at 16 per cent and many farmers are through harvest and busy cutting stalks.

The grain sorghum harvest, the report said, is nearing completion with less than 10 per cent remaining to be combined. A year ago, about a fourth was still in the field.

Reduces Problem

Frost in the milo fields reduced the problem of green shoots. The soybean harvest is also nearly complete.

Lower temperatures eased the storage problems with sugar beets and lifting progressed rapidly. Sugar content continued to improve.

The report said winter wheat is rank and has removed much of the surface moisture supply. The crop is in good condition, but is showing the effect of dry weather, especially in sections where more of the crop was planted on continuous cropped land. Leaf rust is prevalent.

Other Observations

—The early harvest and mild open weather during the fall has favored fall plowing which is well advanced for this date

—Abundant feed supplies are available from harvested corn and milo fields.

—Range and pasture grasses, though dry, contain adequate feed and most stock cattle continue to utilize them.
