The PRAYER FOR TODAY FROM The Upper Room

Jesus answering said, Were there not ten cleansed? but where are the nine? (Luke 17:17)

PRAYER: O God, save us from the sin of ingratitude. As Thou dost so freely give, enable us in loving gratitude to receive. So may Thy gifts become our own and our lives be the tokens of our praise. This we ask in Jesus' name. Amen.

DEMAGOGUERY

DAVID Lawrence, the syndicated writer, says no presidential campaign in the last half century has been full of such demagoguery as is manifest today

"The mystery is why the top men in the camps of both Senator Goldwater and President Johnson have allowed the candidates to become involved in this type of political battle," says Lawrence.

The demagoguery isn't confined to either of the political camps, but is about equally divided between both Neither candidate is debating the issues, or even expressing them, but rather the name-calling grows more intense as the campaign wears on.

President Johnson points to good times and asserts Goldwater as president would get us into a nuclear war. The Senator points at the administration as leading us down the road to socialism but doesn't seem to have a solution

Lawrence says the campaign is all the more puzzling because the political organizations "have come to the conclusion that the bulk of the voters can be awayed by passions and prejudices as well as by epithets and sweeping denunciations"

GREAT PLAINS AND GOLDWATER

(Norfolk Rally News)

WORD from the Great Plains states is more cheering reading to Barry Goldwater's supporters than that from some of the other areas, if we may believe a Wall Street Journal reporter who has been touring the west talking to the rank and file voters

Joe Western, the news writer, finds a reluctance among the farmers, ranchers and beet growers to change their accustomed party affiliations And this area is strong Republican territory

A good many of those Mr Western talked to seemed to reason that Goldwater, if he were elected, would not cut price supports disastrously, and even if he tried to Congress wouldn't cooperate with him

What is in the minds of many of them are other issues of concern to the whole country, inroads of federal government into affairs that should belong to the states is one of these, and high spending by the federal government is another Those Mr Western talked to, many of them, seemed to put such issues first

On the issues closely related to farming there was a good deal of discontent Cattlemen didn't think the government did much to help them when their prices sank

Wheat growers Mr Western found, are railing at present planting controls as too complicated Some are griping because government price supports and hence farm income are lower than last year

Beet growers don't like the cutback in plantings they face in the government's efforts to prevent excessive production next year

And, Mr Western says, there is "general weariness" at operating under government checkreins of all kinds

One would judge from his interviews that the candidate who can find a formula that will maintain profitable price levels without too much government interference would get the Great Plains vote.

Reporter's notebook

SATURDAY IS HOMECOMING DAY AT THE University of Nebraska. I haven't attended any of the festivities for several years, but plan to try and make it this weekend.

The School of Journalism, now quartered in a newly remodeled building called Nebraska Hall, will have its first homecoming in recent history. I hope to visit the school and see Dr. William E. Hall and the others I am acquainted with.

Things are considerably changed on the University campus from what they were in 1928 when I left with a certificate in Journalism. Doctor Hall and his faculty have 245 students seeking majors in their specialty.

I READ in the World-Herald the other day that the 640 employes in the new Omaha Postal Headquarters drop about $4,000 per month into the vending machines in the new building.

That is a heck of a lot of coffee loafing, it seems to me, but perhaps it is normal.

The point of the story was that Omaha vending firms which used to furnish the goodies in the old building were frozen out when an employe committee with the approval of the Omaha postmaster let the contract to a Los Angeles firm.

Don't suppose Bobby Baker is lurking around somehwere, do you? He's interested in vending machines.

FROM the piles of material being accumulated in Dunbar these days it seems that paving will be started on the Syracuse-Dunbar relocation of Nebraska 2 highway. This will be welcome news for the entire area, which is getting tired of the detour that has been in effect for so many months. The 10-mile stretch of Nebraska 2 from Dunbar to Syracuse was for years called the worst piece of highway in Nebraska. In another few months it should be one of the best stretches on the entire state highway system.

THOSE were nice words the World-Herald had to say about Nebraska City's river port:

"No question about it, Nebraska City is Nebraska's foremost Missouri river port, and seems likely to continue to hold that ranking indefinitely . . . . .

"Some energetic people in Nebraska City 25 years ago saw what an asset the river might be to them some day, and they went to work to make dreams come ture. That's the way most cities get ahead."

SAFETY VALVE

HOW LONG, O LORD, HOW LONG?

SANTA BARBARA, Calif., Editor, The News-Press· History tells us that practically all great Nations tend to reach an apex and start to disintegrate within 200 years of their beginning. If this is true, we are now within 12 years of our decline into oblivion. All signs point in this direction at present.

What is carrying us toward this dead-end of tyranny? First, our huge National Debt and our continual policy of advancing the debt limit until it now stands at $324,-000,000,000. This is a fantastic sum, beyond human understanding. When our children grow up and have to face this legacy, they can only believe that we were insane.

We are now in a period of National prosperity, and yet we go deeper and deeper into debt. If we are ever going to balance the budget, it would seem that now [redacted] per month, or $9,113,424,656.40 per year. How long can this go on? For what will they do next — start the printing presses and have us pay $1.00 for a loaf of bread?

Here is a wee example from U. S. News & World Report, August 3, 1964, of just how ridiculous our Government is: "Where tax dollars pay for picnics." The Martin Company of Denver, Colorado, put a claim for $12,000 in 1963 for its annual crab feast, including $1,800 for the crabs and $5,600 to transport them from Baltimore to Denver by plane." Indeed, we are living in a fool's paradise.

Unless YOU take an active interest in your Country you will lose it. Write, wire or phone your Government Representatives and continue to show them that you are vitally interested in the welfare of your Country and do not intend to allow anyone to violate the precepts of our Constitution. Give them your opinion on the various abuses we are now enduring such as, (1) union racketeering, (2) deficit spending, (3) spineless handling of Cuba and Russia, (4) crime and dope infection, (5) dole to the indolent, (6) political graft and corruption, (7) the fallacy of trying to buy peace and friendship, (8) the end result of subsidizing farm products.

I pray, Dear God, give us a Statesman. Give us a MAN.

Cannel at Bay Football Fan, Wife Tangled Up

By WARD CANNEL
Newspaper Enterprise Assn.

MIDDLETOWN, CONN. (NEA) GOLDEN autumn painted the Wesleyan University campus like a metaphor from English Composition (3-1) A small dog chased a big dog across the football field And somewhere a traditional New England steeple clock intoned an ancient note signifying that the time was exactly 1 07

The stands were starting to fill up with those downy-cheeked college men and their pale young ladies one reads about so frequently in the surveys

"You'll have to tell me again," the wife said "Who are they playing?"

"Bowdoin College," we said

"Touch or tackle?" she asked, watching the two dogs race across the goal line and up a hill toward the observatory.

Cannel

"Don't be that way," we said. "A bargain is a bargain."

"Well honestly," she said. "It's not even a regulation-size football field."

"Certainly it is," we said "And the purest kind of college football Two fine, small New England schools Ivy Scholarship Leadership "

"Oh dear," she wailed "I've forgotten the name of the other school "

"Wesleyan," we said.

"No, the other one," she said "The one I'm supposed to root for"

"Bowdoin," we said "But you're not supposed to root for anybody until after the half That's the whole idea of coming here—not to make up your mind until you see for yourself which side deserves your cheering"

"I think," she said a little louder than we thought was necessary," this is the most absolutely idiotic idea you have ever come up with"

"A bargain is a bargain" we said, putting an end to the discussion and standing up for the kickoff

We will admit that it is somewhat trying to watch a football game without taking sides. The jumping and thumping look a little peculiar when your allegiance is not engaged.

But in that regard, it has been a particularly hard season on the allegiance You simply cannot continue to root against the New York Yankees without showing the strain Especially in an election year And with Mrs Rockefeller vs Dr Murphy And Walter Cronkite vs Huntley and Brinkley

It has been almost more than an ardent fan can withstand And you end up without enough energy to take sides on General de Gaulle, the Warren Commission Report or the other national games

The only solution, as we see it, is the use of right reason rather than passion Consequently, at half time with the score Bowdoin-7, Wesleyan-0 we told the wife

All right Now choose your team But you have to have three good reasons"

Bowdoin" she snapped

Why? we snapped back

"Because they're a better team," she said. "Because they're going to win. And because I know you're rooting for the other team and this is the most idiotic idea you have ever come up with."

Harvest moves in row crops

LINCOLN (UPI) — Dry weather last week allowed the fall harvest of row crops to advance seasonally, the state-federal Division of Agricultural Statistics reported today

In its weekly crop report the division said most crops are expected to ripen quickly now as killing frost has occurred in nearly all parts of the state

Corn picking is underway in some parts, but high moisture content generally remains too high for safe cribbing or storage If dry weather prevails, picking will get into full swing soon, though

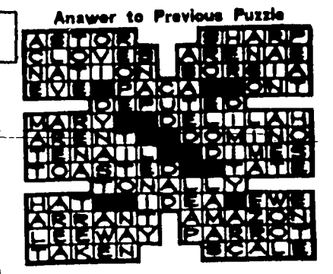

The division said corn ears have been dropping to the ground in some fields as a result of stalk rot and corn borer damage

Harvest of grain sorghums is nearly 30 per cent completed Yields vary considerably because of adverse weather conditions under which the crop was grown

Good Progress

Harvest of soybeans made good progress and nearly half of the crop has now been combined

The buck Ends here . . . .

By Ivan D. E. Beaumont

According to this month's American Legion magazine, the country is facing a growing rat population.

Well, I never questioned the headline, 'cause I think we all knew a few rats, but then I read a little deeper into the story to find the fella was talking about the four-legged kind.

I haven't been out to the "civic center" north of town, for a week, but apparently the city's rat-poisoning project is doing fine.

Otherwise my mailman, Frank Bataillon, would have said something.

Congratulations to Bob "T-Bird" Toler and his Chamber committee for throwing a fine shindig for area firemen. The food was good, the refreshments tasty, but better yet was that story about Don Roberts and the holdup at the bank.

It takes a special kind of person to be a fireman. Not everyone has the opportunity to get called out in the middle of the night or in the middle of work during rain, sleet, sunshine, or snow to inhale black smoke, man an ax or a firehose for who knows how many hours.

Nebraska City is another of those fortunate towns that has a dedicated group of firemen who for some strange reason enjoy that kind of activity.
