Needy will get scrambled eggs

ON THE FARM FRONT

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Scrambled eggs for breakfast nine days a month. That's what a new addition to the Agriculture Department's food commodity donation program will mean to 3.5 million needy Americans who get free foods under the program.

When Agriculture Secretary Orville L. Freeman, responding to initial demands of the poor people's campaign last month, expanded the number of commodities donated from 16 to about 24, one of the items added was a scrambled egg mix.

Purchases began several weeks ago with initial deliveries scheduled in July. So far, the department has bought nearly 7.6 million pounds of the mix for $8.1 million. Officials plan currently to distribute the mix at a rate of roughly 2.6 million pounds a month — enough to provide one 12-ounce can monthly to each person enrolled in the donation program.

Ordinary dried eggs have been donated to the needy in the past, but this is the first time the scrambled egg mix — a relatively new product — has been donated.

Officials said privately that the mix, which they said has had only limited civilian commercial sales in the past, is far superior in taste to scrambled eggs reconstituted from old-style dried eggs. The conventional dried product, experts said, is designed mainly for use in baking or in oven-cooked food.

The new mix includes 51 per cent whole egg solids from large or medium Grade A eggs plus 30 per cent dried nonfat milk, 15 per cent corn oil, 1.5 per cent salt and 2.5 per cent moisture. A department official said the mix had been patented by Roberts Dairy Co., Lincoln, Neb., but supplies are currently coming from a number of egg processing firms.

Label directions on the cans purchased by the government indicate a can of the mix, combined with an equal amount of warm water, will make nine servings of scrambled eggs.

There isn't much question in Mexico about the heavyweight boxing champion—Joe Frazier of the U.S.

Manuel Ramos gave it a go the other night at Madison Square Garden, but he just didn't have it.

+ + + + +

Manuel may have wanted to get out of the ring in the second round like a fighter I saw in action at a Navy "smoker" in Japan a number of years ago.

It started out as a good fight with both boys putting out a lot of energy. Fred Haase, who was on another boxing card that same night, probably will remember that first round when those two heavyweights started pounding away.

The losing fighter took about three stiff punches that bounced his head. He held up his gloves, made a not-so-courteous gesture, crawled out of the ring and disappeared into the crowd for a can of beer.

Hello to W.A. "Bill" Williams down in hurricane country!

Remember that note you put on the windshield of a Lancaster county licensed car parked at a shopping center in Lelgh High Acres, Florida?

I've got that note.

The driver and owner of the car is Marion Ludi, Lincoln, a service technician for Friden, Inc., the company which builds offset typesetting equipment, other computers and office machines.

Marion makes frequent trips to the News-Press and he handed me your note.

So be careful down in that thar country, 'cause the hometown folks are keeping in tab.

From what they tell me on Central Avenue, the fellows in that "other" club miss your devotion and fellowship.

The return trip from Chicago the other night for Max Moyer and myself was a little more than uneventful.

The pilot suggested we keep our seat belts fastened because of some turbulence. Actually, the big jet rode much smoother than "Twiggy" on First Corso.

So, Max and I sat there and tried out a little squeezins' at 31,000 feet and I smelled up the place with my pipe.

As we entered the passenger room at Eppley airfield, my wife came up to me and asked: "Did you see Pat?"

"Pat, who?" I questioned.

"Mrs Richard (Pat) Nixon."

+ + + + +

Holy mackerel. We had traveled from Chicago to Omaha with Mrs Richard Nixon and didn't even know she was on the plane.

+ + + + +

But we took care of that, pronto. We got several pictures and had a chance to shake hands and say welcome to Nebraska to what may well be the next First Lady.

+ + + + +

The man in the business suit who was closely escorting Mrs Nixon identified himself as a "member of the staff," but we surmised that he was following LBJ's orders and stayed by the side of Mrs Nixon, doing the job he was assigned as a Secret Service agent.
