Harold Wilkins, the Bellevue artist, held the attention of tourism promoters at a Sunday meeting at Buffalo City with a special painting exhibition.

The artist, introduced by John Gebbie, executive director of the Nebraskaland Foundation, painted a western scene on suggestions of his audience.

The painting was the door prize and Bob Clark, KNCY general manager, the winner, said the painting will go on a wall in his new apartment. "I was thrilled," Bob said.

Mr Wilkins is no stranger to this country. He was born in Tabor, Ia., area and moved to South Dakota as a child. He ranched in the Dakotas, entered the air force and retired as a lieutenant colonel.

His artwork is spread across Nebraska. Each painting is a story.

The Nebraskaland Foundation, which was formed for the Nebraska Centennial, operates with contributions to promote tourism in the state. Mr and Mrs Bill Stites, owners of Buffalo City, and tourist boosters, helped Gebbie arrange the meeting.

I like Spiro Agnew. He says what many of us think.

"Paint Your Wagon," a $20 million production of Paramount Studios, should be another award winning "Cat Ballou" for its star, Lee Marvin.

The film is playing at Indian Hills. It's a bit on the coarse side, but that roughness is smoothed out with humor. It's a "mature" audience rated movie about Marvin the roughshooting drunken miner, a wife he buys from a Mormon and his "pardner," Clint Eastwood.

They build a sin city along the mountain streams to accommodate the 400 bachelor miners.

The music is good. Can you imagine Lee Marvin singing a solo of a lonesome miner? He does and he's good.

The most exciting TV programs now are those from the Apollo crew.

Generally we don't like interruptions in favorite TV programs, but when the astronauts are "on the air" we look forward to their space shows.

The accomplishments of America's space team are a compliment to free people.

Nebraska City Optimists each year hold a banquet to recognize boys for their athletic abilities during the year.

This year, Optimists are going for broke. They want to get a national athletic hero, one who can stir the enthusiasm among the boys.

Senior High Athletic Director Jim Brockhaus is in charge of getting the speaker. If you "know" someone who can help with obtaining one of the "greats," call Mr Brockhaus. I'm sure he would appreciate it.

Among the suggestions made the other day was Vince Gibson, football coach at Kansas State University at Manhattan. He's quite a guy, one observer said.

If you want to stick your finger in a fan, then tell the people in Waterloo and Ashland we need a dam on the Platte.

The Platte project would create a lake covering 100 square miles, and podner that's a lot of water. Trouble is, the thing won't be filled until 1990 and the real benefits won't be felt until 2040. . .and that doesn't make me feel too good.

$12,916 average salary at NU

Body escorted from Vietnam

Funeral services were held November 12 at Sidney Ia., for Sp-4 Robert D. Harris, 21, who died November 4 of wounds sustained in Vietnam.

Burial was at Wyuka cemetery at Nebraska City. Pallbearers were Richard Gittens, Richard Schobert, William Sheldon, Rodney McElroy, Robert Shirley and Donald Hill.

Sp-4 Ronald Pullman, also of Sidney, Ia., escorted the body from Vietnam to the U.S., for funeral services.

Specialist Harris, son of Mr and Mrs Gene Harris, was born March 8, 1948. He graduated from Sidney high school in 1966 and attended Northeastern Junior College at Sterling, Colo., for a year and a half.

He entered the Army in January 1969 and arrived in Vietnam June 8 with the First Cavalry Division. He was stationed near Tay Ninh and on October 2 he was wounded in action.

The family thought he was making a satisfactory recovery when he was put on the critical list. He died the same day.

Survivors not previously listed are a great grandmother, Mrs Ida Briley, Stanton, Ia.; and aunts and uncles, Mr and Mrs Carlton Keyser, Miss Lyla Harris, Nebraska City; Mr and Mrs Robert Niccoli, Shawnee, Kans., Mr and Mrs Wade Cullin, Bellevue and Mr and Mrs Everett McAlexander, Percival.

Time magazine muzzles Mr Agnew

NEW YORK (UPI) — Time magazine hid Vice President Spiro T. Agnew's mouth on some of its covers this week, but said it was a mistake.

About 320,000 copies of the magazine have been mailed out with the address label pasted across the mouth of the Vice President.

"It was a production error," a magazine spokesman said Friday. "We had some trouble in the Atlanta production plant. It definitely was not a prank."

The error appeared on eight per cent of the Time copies mailed in the United States.

Mrs Rachel Walch

Guests of Mr and Mrs Merlin Flessner recently were Mr and Mrs Lyman Ballard of Douglas and their weekend guests, the Warren Bell family of Lawrence, Kansas.

Fred Ellig has received word of the death of George Lechner of Harper, Kansas. He is a cousin of the Elligs and Lenhart families and formerly lived in the Burr and Saunders Creek communities. Funeral services were held on Wednesday at the Mortuary in Harper.

Mrs Fred Ellig observed her birthday Friday. That evening their children surprised her coming for the evening. Helping her celebrate were the Joe Pojar family of Lincoln, the Rodney Roesener family of Cook and Mr and Mrs Bruce Gerking.

The Robert Stoner family of Lincoln, Mr and Mrs Merle Moss and John and Tom of Syracuse and the Ned Snyders of Nebraska City spent a weekend at the Elmer Moss home. Mr and Mrs Calvin Lafollette Syracuse joined the group Sunday.

Mr and Mrs Elmer Moss and Mr and Mrs Elmer Paulsen joined the group of the Jolly Trippers for a covered dish dinner at the Fair Center in Syracuse. Mr and Mrs Elmer Wilkens hosted the event. After dinner slides and pictures taken by different ones were shown.

Mrs Lena Bleifernick and Arnold Neeman attended church at Geneva and had dinner and lunch with the Bernard Bleifernick family.

The United Presbyterian Women met at the Hopewell church Thursday afternoon. Pastor Busk and daughter Sara were guests. Mrs Arthur Maller was in charge of World Service. Gifts for the Christmas box were received and the box was filled to be sent to the Indians in Colorado. Bazaar plans were discussed. Members picked out nut meats and quilted. Mrs Carl Cameron was the social hour hostess.
