The Buck Ends Here

By IVAN D.E. BEAUMONT

The Nebraska City Jaycees will have one less entrant in the annual Christmas lighting contest — A. W Carr of 1215 Third Avenue said he is selling all his decorations.

Mr Carr's home has been one of the highlights of many Christmas lighting tours by families for 10 years He has several plaques which recognize him as a winner and several other recognitions earned through the years

His wife, Zella Ziegenhain of Beatrice, died in June And Mr Carr said he has lost interest in the annual job

"She didn't help much with the work of putting up the lights, but she sure enjoyed them," Mr Carr said

The Carrs moved to Nebraska City from Avoca in 1961 Mr Carr retired in 1960 as a Missouri Pacific agent after 47 years of service. He started his Christmas decorating job with a single nativity scene at his home in Avoca in 1948

The hobby soared in ambition and last year Mr Carr said he had nearly 1,900 bulbs and "no idea" now many feet of wiring His lighted flag contains 525 bulbs

The Carr home was lighted after Thanksgiving and left on until New Year's, much to the complete satisfaction and amazement of many, many motorists who drove past 1215 Third Avenue.

Mr and Mrs Carr who were married for 53 years, enjoyed the hobby through the years. "We really never got to see the decorations; we were always on the back side "

The Jaycees surely will feel the loss of the competition of Mr Carr in the Christmas lighting contest

Thank you, Mr Carr, for sharing your personal hobby with so many people.

John Quinlan, the News-Press reporter who shares this desk has on "his side" a left handed dictionary

It should be used when you're about ready to quit your job and join the Foreign Legion.

For example, how's this for cheer?

A skeleton — That's a stripteaser who overdid it

A pretzel — A biscuit on a bender

Profit — That's wages for those who don't work

Dictionary — That's a guide to the spelling of words which can be located if you know how to spell them

Diaper — Trousers worn during the age of the indescrition

Broadcloth — The kind used for Jackie Gleason's pants

+++++

Despite threats, we will publish a list of the Nebraska City subscribers to Playboy magazine

Surprisingly, most of the subscribers are housewives:

"I buy it for my husband every Christmas," one housewife replied. "I'd rather see him sit in the living room with that magazine and snicker."

Dad to his son, the Boy Scout·

"Did you do a good deed today, son?"

"Sure did, Dad," the youngster beamed, "five of us escorted a little old lady across a street."

"Five? Why'd it take so many?"

"She didn't want to go," the boy replied.

Kenny Clinefelter, the editor of the Lincoln Telephone company magazine, puts out a newsy issue each month that not only contains the happenings in the LT&T business, but also several features.

(Kenny and I worked at the Fairbury Daily News, where we learned to develop film and make prints in the darkroom at the police station. we had some good times the Daily News has since folded and taken over by the Fairbury Journal)

He often reprints humorous articles and the best we've read recently was about General Patton, the famous WWII commander in Europe

Ken said it was the only time General Patton was speechless

The only time anybody ever saw Lieut Gen George S Patton at a complete loss for words was during his desert maneuvers in 1942 in the Southern California desert, before he went overseas to Africa

One day Patton sped down a road in a jeep Suddenly, he yelled "Stop," and the jeep shrieked to a halt Patton jumped out and strode over to a telephone pole Up the pole was a young man in soiled khaki, no cap and open shirt He was fixing a wire

"Come down here," the general roared

The lad looked down at the immaculate general "I'm busy," he said.

Patton nearly went up the pole after him Fuming, he repeated his command The youth shrugged and came down the pole And, horror piled on horror He did not salute

The veins stood out on the general's forehead He bitterly berated the youth for his unpressed trousers, his unshined shoes, his open collar, his lack of a cap, his unpardonable failure to salute

Finally at the height of his rage, he stormed, "You're a disgrace to my army I won't tolerate it, I tell you, I won't Give me your name and company "

It was the first chance the lad had to speak He looked Patton straight in the eye

"My name is Joe Johnson My company is the Southern California Bell Telephone Co , and you can go straight to hell!"

Hiring freeze ordered as dollars are watched

LINCOLN, Neb. (AP) — A freeze on new staff appointments has been ordered on Lincoln and Omaha campuses of the University of Nebraska, regents were informed Friday

The action stems from a drop below projected levels of tuition revenue this fall, a deficit said to total more than $1.4 million.

Chancellor James Zumberge of the University of Nebraska-Lincoln said the notice to his deans to refrain from making further hiring commitments without specific approval went out last Monday.

Chancellor Ronald Roskens of the University of Nebraska at Omaha said his similar directive was issued three weeks ago

The disclosure came after Regent James Moylan of Omaha, m the light of the financial bind, proposed such a freeze

Dr Howard Neville, NU executive vice president for administration, said the income loss—below expectations—for the full year is estimated at $1,444,710 on the two campuses—$472,710 at UNO and $927,000 at UNL.

A reduction in paid credit hours, and the effects of legislation which make it easier for nonresident students to acquire resident status for tuition purposes, caused the dropoff

Neville said the proposed solution involves asking the 1973 legislature, when it convenes in January, to approve a deficiency appropriation of $430,710, of which $248,000 would go to UNL and $182,710 to UNO.

He proposed that the remainder of the deficiency be offset by expenditure reductions, reduction of scholarships and use of certain reserve monies available.

President D.B. Varner said he is "not enthusiastic" about asking the legislature for a deficiency appropriation. The school year could be nearing an end before the legislature makes a judgment, he noted But he indicated the alternative—reducing expenditures or making a special tuition assessment against students—also are painful

What must be remembered, Varner said, is that higher education is entering a new era, marked by stable or declining enrollments as opposed to the swelling enrollmentsm of the past

"We're not going to have expansion budgets that we've had in the past," said Varner.

Zumberge reminded that the problem is not peculiar to Nebraska. Other institutions across the country already have been confronted by it

City planners meet Wednesday

The Nebraska City planning commission will meet Wednesday at 7·30 p m at City Hall, rather than Tuesday night as is customary so the meeting will not conflict with the annual Chamber of Commerce banquet

The only item on the agenda is a review of the revised drawings of the proposed Jay Valley subdivision.

Regents okay the new bylaws

LINCOLN, Neb (AP) -- A new set of University of Nebraska bylaws, more than a year and a half in the making, was approved Friday by the Board of Regents

Normally routine approval by the governor and attorney general, and formal filing with the secretary of state, will put the document into effect

Several proposals for revisions m the document were received by regents at a final public hearing Thursday, and several of the suggestions were incorporated into the bylaws as finally adopted.

Regents agreed to faculty-backed reinstatement of clauses on academic freedom and nontenured faculty rights

As a result, the bylaws state that the professional staff is not to be sanctioned for exercising the right of academic freedom—the right to teach, research and speak on matters no matter how unpopular they might be

Regents also included language which says action is not to be taken against a faculty member if that action violates his civil rights

The bylaws set out that a nontenured staff member when notified that his appointment will not be renewed shall have an opportunity to request a reconsideration, or petition the grievance committee for a hearing

A request that tenure, as applied to the academic faculty, be applied also to county extension agents was rejected

One of the approved late changes extended the powers of campus ombudsmen to include the mediation of complaints, as well as simply investigate of complaints
